RBC to shut Jardins Rosemère location by June 3

Older clients oppose relocation to Labelle/A640 branch

MARTIN C. BARRY

Unless head office at RBC has an incredible last-minute change of heart, the bank will be permanently closing its Jardins Rosemère branch on June 3.

And if that happens, a good number of the branch's more than 9,000 holders of personal accounts may choose to follow one client's advice given last week: he said they should transfer their lucrative accounts to other financial institutions to protest what he said is RBC's inconsiderate and impersonal treatment.

RBC says change inevitable

Diane Jacob, RBC's regional vice-president for Laval/Laurentians, tried to reassure RBC's Rosemère clients (who accepted an invitation to a meeting on March 22 at the Jardins Rosemère branch on Grande Côte Rd.) that the closing is largely the result of global conditions where change has become the norm.

She said this to a gathering of around 100 mostly senior account holders who have long been used to doing their banking inside a branch with human tellers, rather than in any of the technologically-advanced ways now available.

Regardless, Jacob couldn't conceal the fact that, based on a declining viability of the Jardins Rosemère branch, RBC has no intention of keeping it open and existing accounts will be transferred to the RBC branch at 370 Labelle Blvd. near Autoroute 640. This will end RBC's presence in the centre of Rosemère where there has been an RBC branch since 1957.

Fewer branch clients

Jacob maintained that up to 90 per cent of RBC's current clients visit a branch less than three times per year because they do their banking by other means, and that even Automated Teller Machine use has dropped by 10 per cent in the past six years. "These are significant trends that we must adjust and adapt to," she said.

According to Jacob, client traffic at Jardins Rosemère dropped by seven per cent per year in recent years while ATM transactions are down 43 per cent since 2008. All the same, it was evident as she introduced several of the Jardins Rosemère branch staff members (some of whom have been there up to 17 years) that the clients are bound to miss the old branch regardless of what corporate headquarters says.

New branch criticized

According to longtime Jardins Rosemère branch user Carla Young, clients were assured approximately eight years ago when the Labelle Blvd. branch was built that Jardins Rosemère would remain open. In an e-mail to the North Shore News, she said the Labelle location is inaccessible to certain segments of the population who don't drive and that it's considered dangerous because of the traffic along Labelle Blvd. heading onto the A640.

'We will take everything from Royal Bank and that will show them that we have some power left,'

said one customer, urging others to shut their accounts

She also suggested that many loyal customers, especially seniors, aren't comfortable with the exit from the newer branch onto Labelle, that they have said they would have to drive north on Labelle to Ste-Thérèse and return to Rosemère via a circuitous route that could be an 8-10 kilometer detour, and that because the Labelle/640 location has no sidewalks, crossings are extremely dangerous for pedestrians and cyclists. She noted that children certainly could not cycle to the bank as they do now at Jardins Rosemère.

Seniors being 'let down'

"You sit in the heart of a retirement community," Dave Hemens, one of the younger clients present at the meeting, noted. "Me, I do banking everywhere. I do banking electronically. But the people in this community don't do it this way. They primarily do it face to face in a trusted manner.

"The problem is you have wonderful employees here, but you're moving them out of the

"The ones whom this branch most serves are being the most let down by the move," Rosemère resident Dave Hemens said.

RBC's decision to close its Jardins Rosemère branch has some senior citizens in Rosemère threatening to move their accounts to another bank.

range of the people who will use them," he continued. "They can't make it out there. It sounds from my perspective that RBC built the branch down near the mall and now is justifying the bill by moving everything over there when this is the heart of the community ... The ones whom this branch most serves are being the most let down by the move and that's problem we face."

Says clients should close accounts

A Jardins Rosemère client who identified himself as Kashmir suggested that unless RBC reverses its decision to shut the branch, "then we will all of us promise today that we will take our business from Royal Bank completely out and go to some other bank. We will take everything from Royal Bank and that will show them that we have some power left, or at least they will miss us." ■

Should anyone be alarmed that Donald Trump – currently leading the field to be the Republican Party nominee – stands a good chance of going on to become President of the United States? Probably, considering that Trump's election to office would mark the first time a demagogue of such proportions would lead the world's most powerful nation.

As Chicago Tribune political writer Steve Chapman stated in a recent column, American political activists who have had the nerve to merely hold up signs in silent protest at Trump rallies have had them ripped away. Protesters have also been pushed, kicked, punched and spit on, Chapman noted. “If you see somebody getting ready to throw a tomato, knock the crap out of them,” Trump told supporters at one rally.

“Louder were the cheers when Trump roared ‘Get ‘em outta here!’ to summon his security team after protests erupted,” David Von Drehle wrote in a March 14 Time Magazine profile describing a Trump campaign event. “The crowd had seemed quite mild just before, and just after, these Orwellian minutes of hate. But the delight in the clash, and the frisson of implied violence, was unmistakable.”

of the press as defined by the U.S. Supreme Court, by changing libel laws to make it easier for public figures to win lawsuits.

This is all apart from Trump's pre-campaign pledges. They include building a wall between the U.S. and Mexico (and then billing it to the Mexican government), refusing entry into the U.S. to Muslims, and adopting new and radically protectionist U.S. foreign trade policies that would probably precipitate trade wars after brushing aside international trade agreements such as NAFTA and the more recent Trans-Pacific Partnership.

In the meantime, Trump has stated that he admires Russian President Vladimir Putin. This ought not be surprising, taking into account that fundamentally they are both oligarchs who believe that raw individual strength should determine who's fit to lead a nation, rather than democratic principles. If Trump should go on to win not just the Republican nomination but also the presidency, the world could well find itself looking at a new and ascending political order defined increasingly by oligarchs.

With all that's negative about the man, on a more positive note Trump may actually not be as bad as he initially seems. One has to take into account that he is a native of New York City and that New Yorkers typically have a very rough and rude exterior. But they're also known for being big hearted under the right circumstances and for getting things together with major acts of generosity when the need calls for it. So here's to hoping that Donald Trump falls into this latter category and that if he becomes President of the U.S. a more humane side to him will emerge and he becomes more of a statesman.

Trudeau Liberals’ first budget contains immigration measures

Finance Minister outlines spending to Newsfirst Multimedia

MARTIN C. BARRY

In a conference call from Ottawa with journalists from media all over Canada last week, federal Finance Minister Bill Morneau told Newsfirst Multimedia that the Liberal government’s 2016 budget proposes to reduce immigration processing times to prioritize family reunification, while increasing funding for settlement programs to better welcome newcomers.

Reducing poverty

Morneau also said the federal government is “committed to strengthening Canada’s place in the world by ensuring that Canada’s international assistance priorities are focused on poverty reduction and by promoting peace and security.”

This year, according to Morneau, the government intends to admit 300,000 new permanent residents — the highest number since more than a hundred years ago when people were fleeing hardships and conflicts leading up to the First World War. Morneau said budget 2016 proposes to reduce processing times and make family reunification a priority in Canada’s immigration system.

Resettling Syrian refugees

He said the government intends to resettle an additional 10,000 government-assisted Syrian refugees in 2016, and reduce immigration processing times to help reunite families faster. In a statement issued by Morneau’s ministry, they say “Canadians have been deeply affected by the refugee crisis in Syria and the surrounding region and have expressed the desire to help.”

In November 2015, the Government committed $678 million over six years, starting in 2015–2016, to resettle 25,000 Syrian refugees by February 29, 2016, and by committing to resettle an additional 10,000 government-assisted Syrian refugees over the course of 2016. Budget 2016 provides $245 million more over five years for the identification, overseas processing, transportation and resettlement of the additional 10,000 Syrian refugees.

“We are committed to getting permanent housing for the Syrian refugees who’ve come to Canada,” Morneau told Newsfirst Multimedia regarding some of the ways that the above sums will be spent, while adding that Immigration Minister John McCallum had previously stated that he believes permanent housing can be found by June for the 25,000 Syrian refugees who arrived in Canada by the end of February.

‘We are committed to getting permanent housing for the Syrian refugees who’ve come to Canada’

Resettlement procedures

“That is certainly our target in that regard,” Morneau continued. “I think you can imagine that the processing initiatives for the next group of immigrants coming is similar in the sense that we need to interview people, do health reviews and we need to ensure that we resettle people in a way that allows them to start their lives in Canada.”

According to Morneau, the 2016 budget offers immediate help to those who need it most and lays the groundwork for long-term economic growth. As of Jan. 1, he added, the Liberal government’s new middle-class tax cut will affect roughly 9 million Canadians who can expect to receive a bigger paycheck as a result.

Another measure in budget 2016, the government’s new Canada Child Benefit, is being promoted by the Liberals as “a simpler, tax-free, more generous, targeted benefit that helps those who need it most: the middle class.” They say that starting in July, nine out of ten families will receive more money than they did under the previous government.

Infrastructure spending

Morneau said budget 2016 signals a new approach that will create jobs and improve the quality of life for Canadians “today and in the future.” This includes new investments in infrastructure that total more than $120 billion over the next decade. As an immediate first step, the government will invest $11.9 billion in modern and reliable public transit, water and wastewater systems, affordable housing, and in retrofits and repairs to protect existing projects from the effects of climate change.

“Our plan will recapture the hope and optimism for the future that existed in previous generations, and put it to work for the next,” the Finance Minister added. “Real change is not just about today or tomorrow. It is about revitalizing the economy in the years and decades to come, so that it works for the middle class and helps those working hard to join it.” ■

Exercising: no more excuses

I'm not motivated. It's probably because you haven't found an activity you enjoy. What about dance, karate, tennis or bodybuilding? Think about what you'd like to do and take advantage of free trial sessions. Eventually, you'll find something you like, and you may even start looking forward to it every week.

I don't have the money. Most municipalities offer a wide range of activities at affordable prices, and sports like running and ice skating require minimal equipment.

So, no more excuses. It's time to exercise!

You can further protect your joints by alternating between physically demanding activities and relaxing activities.

St-Eustache Hospital gets $10,000 for cancer psychology support

Fundraiser held by local Pharmaprix staff, clients and owners

(NSN) The clients and staff of six Pharmaprix stores on the North Shore and in the Lower Laurentian region were instrumental recently in raising $10,000 for the Centre intégré de santé et de services sociaux (CISSS) des Laurentides.

Cancer psychological support

The initiative, which was part of Pharmaprix's Tree of Life campaign, took place in support of a Saint Eustache Hospital program for providing psychological counselling to women diagnosed with cancer.

"We are profoundly touched by the devotion of the owners of the Pharmaprix stores as well as the support of all the people from the Lower Laurentian region," said Julie Boucher, director of multidisciplinary services at CISSS des Laurentides. "Together we will be able to continue to offer women the necessary support to give them courage and strength to start and pursue their struggle against cancer.”

A community effort

For her part, Yvonne Khamla, owner the Pharmaprix in Saint-Eustache, told guests at a cheque presentation that the extraordinary results of the 2015 campaign attested to the support and commitment of the clients and employees who took part. She also mentioned that Pharmaprix has formed partnerships with local, regional and provincial groups concerned about women's health.

The local Tree of Life campaign took place from Sept. 12 to Oct. 15 last year. The Pharmaprix store owners involved were Julie Turgeon (Blainville), Maria Corcodel (Rosemère), Sylvain Meilleur (Blainville), Yanic Lapointe (Deux-Montagnes and Saint-Eustache) and Yvonne Khamla (Saint-Eustache). ■

A19 Coalition appeals for highway's completion

Larocque wants government to 'get its act into gear'

(NSN) A coalition of municipalities and organizations lobbying for the completion of Autoroute 19 to the North Shore says the project appears to have been pushed aside in the priorities of provincial infrastructure construction and maintenance planners.

According to the Coalition pour le parachèvement de l'autoroute 19 which is headed by Bois-des-Filion mayor Paul Larocque, the A19 project ranks low on the latest list of infrastructure compiled by the province.

“We are asking the government to get its act into gear and to respect commitments made publicly by Premier Jean Charest in 2010 and reiterated by the three major political parties," he said in a statement last week. "We must finish what was started in 1973," added Larocque.

The completion of the A19 would involve the creation of a four-lane limited access highway between autoroutes 440 and 640, with special reserved lanes for public transit leading towards the Laval Metro station as well as privileged parking in Bois-des-Filion and Terrebonne. Larocque noted that currently the amount of traffic carried along the A19 route is more than six times greater than originally planned. ■

Five charged after drug-related assault in January

Thérèse-De Blainville Police conclude investigation

(NSN) Investigators with the Régie de police Thérèse-De Blainville have released the results of an investigation conducted following a drug-related shooting incident which took place last Jan. 23 in the parking lot of a Boisbriand restaurant near Grande-Allée Blvd.

Numerous charges

According to the report, five suspects were arrested and arraigned at the St. Jérôme courthouse between Feb. 14 and March 3. The charges against them include aggravated assault, assault inflicting injuries, illegal use of a firearm, illegal possession of a firearm, concealment of appearance, mischief, conspiracy and use of a firearm in a criminal act.

The police said the following individuals are charged: Dany Morin-Lefebvre, 22, of Boisbriand, David Robert-Themens, 20, Maxime Binette, 24, Tommy Beaulieu, 20, and Éric Sarrazin, 23 (the last four being from Pointe-Calumet).

Drug trafficking

According to the police, the 20-year-old victim contacted them after being repeatedly stabbed with a knife. He was transported to hospital where he underwent emergency surgery to save his life. In the meantime, a perimeter was set up around the crime scene.

A subsequent investigation conducted over six weeks by the police revealed that drug trafficking was involved. “Thanks to the efforts of the police, we were able to proceed with the arrest of the suspects quickly and lay serious charges against these individuals,” said a Régie de police Thérèse-De Blainville spokesperson. “We consider it important to reassure the population that such acts are rare and that we take the necessary steps so that they remain isolated cases.” ■

Fourteen housing units to be built on controversial property

Deux-Montagnes mayor Denis Martin has done what no mayor was able to accomplish in the eight years prior to his taking office: he appears to have finally resolved an almost decade-long conflict that set homeowners near 28th Ave and Oka Rd. against a property developer and the city over the future of a large vacant lot.

Asked whether he thought the situation had finally reached a satisfactory conclusion, Mayor Denis Martin said in an interview with the North Shore News earlier this week, "I would say so," while adding that the final plan calls for six condo units by the side of Oka Rd. and eight single-family houses spread out and stretching back across the property all the way to the edge of Lake of Two Mountains.

On March 24, a special meeting of Deux-Montagnes city council was held to pass a minor derogation to move a parking area for a residential development on the property a little closer to Oka Rd. in accordance with the expressed wishes of nearby residents.

Two homeowners who had been deeply involved in the issue, Monique Lauzon and Peter Largie, attended the meeting, although neither expressed opposition to the derogation motion during question period. Going back as much as 10 years ago, residents of 28th, Lakebreeze and other nearby street had grown increasingly vocal in their objections to plans by Gestion Benoit Dumoulin to build housing on the property.

When the former administration rejected GBD's plans, the company launched a lawsuit against the city which was later resolved to most people's satisfaction. Over the years, the lot underwent a series of re-zonings that sought to respond to nearby residents' wants and needs while seeking at the same time to satisfy the developer.

In the end, according to the mayor, it was an authority beyond the City of Deux-Montagnes that largely ended up settling the matter. Several years ago, the Montreal Metropolitan Community (CMM)'s master plan for urban development in the greater Montreal region obliged municipalities to adopt plans for new development which densify urban layout.

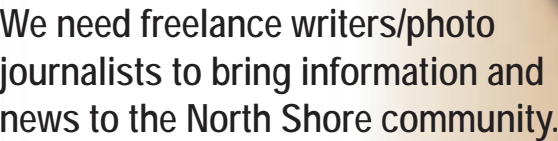

The minimum amount of housing required by the CMM for the lot in question was 14 units. If anybody had a problem with that, there wasn't much if anything that the City of Deux-Montagnes could do. All the same, the mayor insisted, "I think everybody's happy with the minimum which is respecting surrounding neighbours. It's a good conclusion."

As for the time frame for construction, according to Mayor Martin the condos along Oka Rd. are set to be completed and occupied by July 1. As for the single-family homes further inside the lot, they're set to be completed when the sub-divided properties are sold by GBD.

"We're happy that this is concluded," added the mayor. He said part of the reason everything got sorted out properly was the application of diplomacy. "We discussed with the entrepreneur at the same time as with the residents to try to negotiate. The city now gains from seeing a beautiful lot developed which adds value to our tax base. The developer is also happy and the residents are too because the project is preserving the view of the lake.” ■
