City of Rosemère becomes an 'Age-Friendly Municipality'

New status and policy focuses on senior citizens' needs

MARTIN C. BARRY

Rosemère's mayor Madeleine Leduc announced last week that the town is becoming an Age-Friendly Municipality (AFM). First undertaken in 2014, the completed AFM process now seeks to adapt services and programs to encourage the active participation of senior citizens in Rosemère.

Town's evolving needs

As Rosemère's demographic profile has evolved considerably in recent years, the town reacted by updating its Family and Seniors Policy in response to the significant needs of two of its citizen groups: Rosemère's families and its senior citizens.

According to Rosemère officials, the policy was developed in order to maintain and enhance, for the benefit of families and seniors, the Rosemère community's outstanding living environment.

Focus on town's seniors

"Integrating the AFM process in our policy clearly demonstrates the importance accorded to seniors in our community," Leduc said during a press conference held at the municipal library on April 19. "In order to ensure that our practices effectively correspond to our citizens' needs, the Town of Rosemère implemented a consultative process, which gave rise to a plan of action."

Rosemère officials unveiled a new pamphlet recapping the highlights of the policy and a plan of action. Rappid+or Prevention Program, the plan resulting from the new policy, includes a set of actions and interventions involving the two targeted clientele.

Program begins in May

Moreover, the Rappid+or Program, which seeks to promote a safe and healthy living environment for residents 65 years of age and over, will be in operation as of the month of May. The program gives Rosemère senior citizens the opportunity to be visited by a team of volunteers who will assess their environment and recommend measures to ensure their safety by identifying, for example, risks of fire, falling and becoming victims of fraud.

As well, it may be recalled that last February the Town of Rosemère increased its offering of public transit for seniors 65 years of age and over. "These concrete measures, which demonstrate the town's involvement with these two population groups, are fully consistent with the municipality's values as they relate to these persons," added Leduc. ■

Hockey classic in Saint Eustache

Habs Old timers vs. Via Capitale Rive-Nord on May 21

(NSN) Thanks to a partnership between Via Capital Rive-Nord and the Émile-Z.-Laviolette Foundation, a hockey tournament involving the Canadiens Old Timers will be taking place in Sainte-Eustache on May 21.

Participating in the match will be a number of well-known people, including former Canadiens defenceman Francis Bouillon, Saint-Eustache mayor Pierre Charron, Michel Prévost of Investamp and Christian Potvin of Canadian Tire.

All proceeds from the event will be going towards the Émile-Z.-Laviolette Foundation in order to assure the continuity of its services such as lunch boxes, snacks, school dépanneurs, breakfasts, respite, Césame, etc. So it's a date on Sat. May 21 at 6:30 pm at the Complexe Walter-Buswell (220 Arthur-Sauvé Blvd. in Saint-Eustache).

Tickets are available over the Internet at www.lepointdevente.com/billets/lesancienscanadiens, as well as at Via Capitale Rive-Nord, and at Canadian Tire (500, boul. Arthur-Sauvé in Saint-Eustache), or at the Émile-Z.-Laviolette Foundation at 450 623-2112. ■

High beams, tailgaters and going receiptless

Most people have pet peeves. They're relatively minor annoyances that – rightly or not – get on an individual's nerves. Especially if they occur in a repeated fashion

While pet peeves often involve the specific behaviors of other people, such as a spouse or significant others, they can also be more general and concern things we see around us. Here are a few we'd like to get off our chest and that some readers out there might also be able to identify with.

High beams in the city. If there is one thing that has become one of the most in-your-face symptoms of the decline of public civility in our time, it's got to be the abandonment of car driver etiquette – specifically with regards to the use and misuse of high beam headlights.

Although the written and unwritten rules of the road probably haven't changed, there seems to be a greater number of drivers than ever who don't understand that it's not necessary to use high beams in the city given the enormous amount of available street light. On the highway it's a slightly different situation, but the same etiquette is supposed to apply: switch to low beams for oncoming traffic so as not to blind the other driver with high beam glare.

Our pet peeve in particular here concerns drivers – especially in the city – who simply don't respond or outright refuse to when prompted by multiple flashes of high beam from oncoming traffic to switch to low. We don't know what's being taught in driver education these days, but these drivers either never learned or they simply don't care about the safety of anyone else or even their legal obligations.

For the record, highway traffic regulations generally require that drivers not make use of their high beam headlights when they are within 60 metres of following a vehicle or within 150 metres of an approaching vehicle. More succinctly, it's a simple matter of courtesy – although that's something for which a lot of motorists these days have absolutely no use.

Tailgaters paradise. When is Transport Quebec going to mount a campaign to inform motorists of what just might well be the most annoying and potentially dangerous habit among drivers today? Defensive driving consists of being able to visually scan everything within view and to react to it as required for safety. But tailgating is the one road condition that a driver who's being tailgated has no control over – and it's enough sometimes to drive a tailgated driver crazy.

While it's yet another example of inconsiderate driving, under some circumstances it can be a form of aggressive intimidation that can provoke incidents of road rage. All the more reason for the province's transportation ministry to undertake an anti-tailgating campaign.

Need your receipt? As many readers may have noticed, some major retailers in the province seemingly have decided to cut their costs as close to the bone as possible by no longer issuing a paper sales receipt automatically following each transaction. Instead, the server asks the customer first and only issues a receipt when the client confirms that he or she wants it.

Although the Couche Tard chain of convenience stores has been doing this a while now, the practice raises questions about a client's recourse in the event he or she might find a purchase unsatisfactory or for some other reason might require a refund.

It's always been our understanding that a business customer is entitled to a sales receipt regardless of whether they asked for it or not. It's not too difficult to imagine certain complications arising within a retail establishment when someone in possession of merchandise, but with no purchase receipt because the merchant didn't issue one, might end up accused of shoplifting through no fault of their own.

While the province's tax-gathering ministry, Revenu Québec, currently makes it mandatory for bars and restaurants to issue a sales receipt for every transaction, a spokesperson for the agency said in an e-mailed response to Parc Extension News last week that other retailers are not under the same obligation.

Acquitted or not, Mike Duffy should have stuck to journalism

As the dust settles following last week's news of Senator Mike Duffy's acquittal on 31 charges of fraud, breach of trust and misappropriation of public funds, there appears to be a degree of disappointment among Canadians that the former journalist wasn't personally punished, despite the failings of a parliamentary expensing system so vague it became impossible to prove wrongdoing on Duffy's part.

Without going into the particulars of Ontario Court Judge Charles Vaillancourt's 300-page ruling, there is a much easier way to cut to the chase and a lesson to be learned at the same time: very simply, journalists should never allow themselves to be seduced by politicians into becoming full-time players in their treacherous realm.

Of all the categories of professionals who end up working closely, politicians and journalists in particular have a relationship that is at times so close it can be called symbiotic: each has a distinctive but mutually-beneficial interest in interacting with the other.

While politicians thrive from the publicity they garner from the media, journalists have plenty of it to dole out as long as the subject matter being furnished is original, provocative and worthy of a byline. But there is also some crossover which takes place between the two callings.

While some journalists willingly enter the world of political public relations, they don't always keep from getting caught in the big ringer. Becoming involved in politics, even as a bystander or a bit player, often calls for bigger sacrifices, never forgetting that political parties live for themselves as the heartless corporate entities which they fundamentally are.

The late Jean Lapierre, who spent most of his career between 1979 and 2007 in federal politics, had no difficulty transitioning to journalism (although he always denied he was a journalist). However, it's worth noting that Lapierre became involved in politics first, and only fell back on journalism as an alternative when his political prospects had been exhausted. This is perhaps why he managed to almost always do well, unlike others who approached matters from the other way around.

Senator Pamela Wallin, who was accused alongside Mike Duffy, was originally a journalist who successfully negotiated her way upwards not just into politics, but also into corporate boardrooms, as well as into the world of international diplomacy where she was Canada's Consul General in New York City for a time.

But as with Duffy, Wallin's falling out was as dramatic and absolute and was her rise. She was one of four senators singled out for having questionable travel expense claims, which ended up being cast in a manner as to characterize her and the others as criminals long before they'd had their day in court.

Another case in point involving a journalist turned politician concerns Montreal mayor Denis Coderre's appointee to the high-profile chairmanship of the Société de Transport de Montréal – Philippe Schnobb. Three years ago, Schnobb ran for a Montreal city council seat for Coderre, but lost to then-Projet Montréal leader Richard Bergeron.

Coderre, apparently still determined to find a comfortable spot for a well-known Francophone television reporter who somehow became a best friend, employed a loophole – which had previously been used by former mayor Gérald Tremblay – to allow a non-elected transit users' representative (with tarnished objectivity compromising his role as a journalist) to be named chairman of the STM board.

Whatever happens to Schnobb, no one should be too surprised, given the tendency with journalists who cross over into politics, if Schnobb too ends up taking a fall. In the end, one conclusion we can come to is that it is simply too easy for journalists, because of their prominence and elevated profile, to get into politics, compared to the ordinary person who has to work a lot harder.

Therefore, in principle and in practice, journalists ought to remain apart from politics and resist the temptations of political life. As we've seen all too clearly in the cases involving the senators, the potential consequence of ignoring this is to risk being thrown under the bus – as the former Conservative government did to Mike Duffy.

While Duffy was once one of Canada's most respected reporters, now he is vilified despite his acquittal. In the end, he has no one to blame but himself – and the politicians who seduced him and in whom he placed his trust – while putting aside the neutrality of his first calling.

Letters to the Editor

Closure RBC Jardins Rosemère

Dear Editor,

Further to the article in the North Shore News of 16 April 2016, regarding the closure of the RBC Jardins Rosemère, I would like to make the following comments:

The taxibus service for seniors is nothing new and it is based on an existing service offered by the town of Rosemère that only operates on Thursdays and Fridays.

Accessibility to the RBC branch on Labelle blvd. remains hazardous for all clients, not only for those that are senior citizens. It is dangerous to enter and exit the branch by car, foot or bicycle. There is no sidewalk in front of the RBC branch on Labelle blvd. for pedestrians.

The RBC presently services more than 10,000 clients at their Jardins Rosemère branch, the move of these clients will increase the traffic circulation on Labelle blvd. in this area and consequently increase the rate of accident incidents.

According to the Rosemère RBC branch manager, the RBC does not intend to improve the precarious access to the bank to make it safer to enter or exit the RBC branch on Labelle blvd. and no pedestrian sidewalks will be constructed in front of the branch.

With reference to the RBC's 2015 publication "Helping clients thrive and communities prosper", the decision made by the Direction of the RBC to close the Jardins Rosemère branch, contradicts the RBC's mission statement, promulgating the RBC is environmental conscious and community orientated.

Finally, the RBC failed to consult its clients of the intended closure, lacking transparency with its loyal customers. This bank decided, behind the backs of its clients, to close the Jardins Rosemère branch without any concern of the negative impact it would cause to the community of Rosemère and the carbon footprint it would leave behind.

With my best regards,
Clara Galipeau Haak
Rosemère

City of Lorraine launches RAPPID+OR program

(NSN) The City of Lorraine has just launched a new program designed to contribute to the security of senior citizens.

The program, which is available to seniors 65 years of age and older, is a collaboration between Lorraine, the Centre d'Action Bénévole Solange-Beauchamp (CABS), the Bois-des-Filion/Lorraine Fire Department, the Régie intermunicipale de police Thérèse-De Blainville and le Centre intégré de santé et de services sociaux des Laurentides.

Living securely

"Living in one's home in health and security is possible," says Lorraine mayor Lynn Dionne. "That's exactly the goal of this new program which was foreseen in the action plan of our Municipal Friend of Seniors Policy since 2014. All of this is to say that this project is very dear to us. I encourage all seniors to benefit from it in great numbers."

By registering in RAPPID+OR, seniors will receive a preventive visit in their homes from a volunteer from the CABS who will be accompanied by a police officer or a fireman.

These interveners are well-equipped to raise awareness among seniors in matters concerning abuse and to evaluate whether the home of a participant is secure, while recommending things that can be done to prevent risks of fire or falls.

Meeting seniors' needs

Depending on the needs of each individual, an outside organization that is specialized could also be suggested as an additional resource. For seniors, it will be a privileged occasion to ask questions and get information on security-related issues.

Each participant will also receive an information kit including folders from organizations as well as certain items designed to improve household security and well-being of users. These include smoke detectors, anti-stress balls, night lights, etc. To register in the RAPPID+OR program or to refer someone you know, residents are invited to contact the CABS at info@cabsb.org or at 450 430-5056, local 227. ■

Our freshwater in Canada

If 1/5 of the world's freshwater reserves are in our Canada and that Canadian believe and understand that water sustains life, human life, ecosystem's life, why is freshwater not protected.

The example of one Native community near an exploitation site of bituminous sand, that has a high rate of cancer is unacceptable to me; their drinking water has been contaminated, and the oilers keep on going about their business poisoning the environment and all the creatures that live in it.

Please do something before it's too late. It's time for the federal government to implement the right to clean water in Canada by passing an environmental bill of rights that respects, protects and fulfils our right to a healthy environment, including the right to clean water.

Thank you
Lorraine Mougeot

Why are we dumping so much chemicals into it, why are companies allowed to dump cancerigenous substances, why are filtration plants not filtering all the medication entering our sewer systems, and why do we let the fish we eat swim in chemicals, medication residues, and sewage in general. We should not let foreign investors, or foreign companies get control over our Canadian freshwater system. We can be bought so easily that I'm ashamed of the lack of entrepreneurship of Canadians when it comes to our natural resources.

RCMP announces winners of “Name the Puppy Contest”

The Police Dog Service Training Centre—an integral part of RCMP “Depot” Division—is the national training centre in Canada for all RCMP police dog teams. Ninety-three percent of the German Shepherds working as RCMP service dogs were born at the Centre as part of the RCMP Police Dog Breeding Program.

(RCMP) Thirteen puppies born at the RCMP Police Dog Service Training Centre (PDSTC) now have names, thanks to boys and girls representing every province and territory in Canada.

The RCMP received almost 16,000 entries to this year’s Name the Puppy contest. “The training centre staff had a great time sorting through all the entries,” said Insp. Akrum Ghadban, the Officer in Charge of the Police Dog Service Training Centre. “Congratulations to the 13 winners and I look forward to hearing about the success of these newest RCMP recruits.”

All names had to start with the letter J. For multiple entries of the same name, winners were selected at random. The 13 winners will each receive a certificate, an 8×10-inch laminated photo of the puppy they named, a plush German Shepherd toy dog named Justice and an RCMP cap.

The winning entries are:

- Jango: Shayola Cochrane (Whitehorse, Yukon)
- Jolt: Amelie Pardy (Happy Valley-Goose Bay, N.L.)
- Jade: Travis MacDonald (Kensington, P.E.I.)
- Jorgia: Ally Gates (Treherne, Man.)
- Jude: Lacey Eldridge (Condor, Alta.)
- Jix: Mathis Paumier (Montreal, Que.)
- Jett: Lucas Anthony (Battleford, Sask.)
- Jax: Daniel Machmer (Pangnirtung, Nunavut)
- Juno: Meagan Lee (Yellowknife, N.W.T.)
- Java: Sydney Bryson (Kamloops, B.C.)
- Jinx: Lola Kirincich (Halifax, Nova Scotia)
- Jazz: Matthew Stewardson (Thunder Bay, Ont.)
- Jake: Dylan Boudreau (Le Goulet, N.B.)

RCMP police service dog teams are a vital part of front line policing. They search for missing or lost people, track and apprehend criminals, remove illicit drugs from the streets, detect explosives and search for and recover evidence used in crimes. ■

RCMP and CRA raise awareness about ongoing email and phone scams

Beware of scammers impersonating the Canada Revenue Agency

The RCMP and the Canada Revenue Agency (CRA) are warning Canadians about an ongoing scam in which taxpayers across the country receive phone calls or emails from individuals impersonating CRA employees. These people are scammers.

The scammers tell taxpayers that they either owe money to the CRA or have a tax refund. Taxpayers are threatened with arrest or jail time if they do not take immediate action and provide money or personal or financial information.

“The CRA takes these matters very seriously and provides substantial information to Canadians about how to protect themselves from scams undertaken using the CRA’s name. Informing yourself is particularly important during the tax filing season, when such scams peak,” said the Honourable Diane Lebouthillier, Minister of National Revenue. This information, including examples of real scam telephone calls and e-mails, can be easily found on the CRA web site.

“Scammers are always looking for new ways to get your money or your personal information,” warns Assistant Commissioner Todd Shean, who leads the RCMP’s Federal Policing Special Services. “The RCMP works every day to track down fraudsters and bring them to justice, but raising awareness about fraud is also important as it is one of the most effective ways of protecting Canadians from scammers. The more you know about a specific fraud, the less likely you’ll be a victim of that fraud.”

The RCMP plays a crucial role in educating the public about scams, and has a number of programs in place to track fraud, including one run by the Canadian Anti-Fraud Centre (CAFC). The CAFC monitors all types of scams, and warns Canadians to be on the lookout for scammers during the upcoming tax season. The RCMP also works closely with the CRA to raise awareness about tax-related scams.

When CRA employees call taxpayers, they follow established procedures to ensure personal information is protected. To confirm the authenticity of a call, contact the CRA by using its official telephone number for individual tax enquiries: 1-800-959-8281. You can also verify your individual tax account through a secure CRA portal: My Account.

If you believe you may be the victim of fraud or have given personal or financial information in error, contact your local police service and your financial institution. ■

A realistic portrayal of a CRA Scam

The following is a realistic portrayal of a CRA Scam that has been seen by RCMP investigators. This approach is one of many used by fraudsters.

Imagine your father, a middle-aged man who has had a long hard day at work, and all he wants to do is just to relax as he watches his favorite TV program. The home phone rings and his wife says they are asking for “Tom ____”. (The number displayed on their callerID was 800-959-8281, which is a valid CRA phone number) Your father, “Tom ____”, has always lived in _____. Tom takes the call when his wife passes the phone to him:

CRA Imposter: Hello I am calling from the Canadian Revenue Agency, is this Tom ____?

Tom: Yes, who is this, what is this regarding?

CRA Imposter: This is Eric Foster (an Anglophone surname, which is confusing as it is contrasted by a strong ethnic accent) of the Canadian Revenue Agency and my badge number is CRM 3542. Can I please have your date of birth and address?

Tom: October 26, 1955, address is _____. Can you please tell me what is this related to? Is there a problem?

Eric Foster (CRA Imposter #1): Yes we checked your tax returns form 2008-2013 and we found you owe $5,000. This is a serious matter and you better resolve it now.

Tom: I don’t understand. I did my taxes on time and I always pay what I owe. This makes no sense.

Eric Foster (CRA Imposter #1): You better cooperate otherwise you will be arrested and all your assets will be seized. (Raised tone of voice)

Tom: Why didn’t I get something in writing to inform me of this?

Eric Foster (CRA Imposter #1): We have sent you numerous letters which you did not answer so this is your last chance to resolve this debt.

Tom: I don’t understand, you are making me nervous, I do want to deal with this now but I still don’t understand how I could owe so much...

Eric Foster (CRA Imposter #1): Interrupts..... Sir, I have my supervisor, Mr. Jonathan Knight, here and he will explain this better to you.

Tom: Ok, ok... (while on phone, wrote a note to his wife asking her to call CRA from her cell and inquire on the badge number and if this is legit call)

Jonathan Knight (CRA Imposter #2): This is Mr. Jonathan Knight badge number CRM 49711. Mr. ____ this is a very serious matter and you are required to pay us in the next two hours or else an arrest will be made. You owe us $5,000!!!

Tom: I don’t have that amount of money available. That is too much and I definitely won’t have it in the next two hours.

Jonathan Knight (CRA Imposter #2): What do you have in your bank account Mr. ____? Tom?? You better take me seriously, we need a payment tonight. We need you to send an electronic money transfer in next two hours!!

Tom: I could get half that cash in 30 minutes or so but not the full $5,000... (his wife now wrote a note to him saying” It’s a scam, hang up”)

Jonathan Knight (CRA Imposter #2): Sir, you are not understanding how critical this situation is, do you want to go to jail??

Tom: I think you are not who you say you are and you are trying to scam me. I will call the local police and report this immediately.

Jonathan Knight (CRA Imposter #2): THIS WAS A WRONG MOVE, WE KNOW WHERE YOU LIVE AND WE CAN COME KILL YOU OR MAYBE WE WILL BLOW UP YOUR HOME!!! (hangs up)

“Tom” and his spouse were seriously upset by the nature of this phone call and his wife most certainly was intimidated by the threat made in the end. They looked up the number that appeared on their call display and it led them to a legitimate Canada Revenue Agency website. (Please note: although the phone number displayed was legitimate it was “spoofed” meaning it was made to impersonate another person or in this case CRA’s caller ID.) They contacted the local police and filed a report. They were not aware that such tools existed to enable the caller to set any number to appear on a display. Luckily, they were able to identify the call was a scam and no money was lost. Unfortunately, for many other Canadians the fear and intimidation as well as the legitimacy of the phone number being a valid CRA phone number, pushed them over the edge and they sent money to the scammers.

To note: The names Eric Foster and Jonathan Knight have been used by CRA imposters in actual calls

What makes this worse is that many victims never report these incidents to the police. If you, a friend or family member has either received a call from a fraudster, or has lost money through this type of call, please report it. Lastly, if you are reading this, please do your part in sharing this message with your friends and family and help us to create more awareness of this type of fraud.

This is a fraud similar to the Immigration scam. Both extort money from their victims through a number of different threats. Both of these frauds are being perpetuated coast to coast, and have impacted both male and female victims from many different age groups and cultural backgrounds.

When/if you receive a suspect phone call from someone purporting to be the CRA, Immigration Refugees and Citizenship Canada (IRCC), [Formerly known as Citizenship and Immigration Canada (CIC)], RCMP or other government agency please take the following steps:

1. IF YOU HAVE CALL DISPLAY ON YOUR PHONE, NOTE THE NUMBER WHERE THE CALL CAME FROM. 2. HANG UP.
3. LOOK UP THE “REAL” NUMBER FOR THE AGENCY IN QUESTION. 4. CALL THE AGENCY TO CONFIRM OR REFUTE YOUR SITUATION. 5. REPORT THE FRAUDULENT CALL.

If you or a family member has fallen victim to this fraud, please report to your local police service, as well as the Canadian Anti-Fraud Centre (CAFC). You have two ways to make a report to the CAFC; either by phone at 1-888-495-8501 (9:00 a.m. - 5:00 p.m. Eastern Time) or through their online reporting tool at <http://www.antifraudcentre-centreantifraude.ca/reportincident-signalerincident/index-eng.htm> ■

‘Play for Autism’ hockey to

Deux-Montagnes mayor Denis Martin, city councillor Margaret Lavallée and others help get the first annual ‘4 on 4’ Play for Autism Hockey Tournament underway on Saturday April 16 with the ceremonial drop of the first puck.

MARTIN C. BARRY

The first annual ‘4 on 4’ Play for Autism Hockey Tournament, which took place on April 16 at the Deux-Montagnes Olympia, raised more than $2,500 for autism services at Crestview Elementary School in Laval.

The tournament consisted of nine teams. Although the winner of pool A was Toitures Senic, the bigger winner was Crestview Elementary for whom a total of $2,525 was raised.

“It was a great day filled with great hockey,” said Deux-Montagnes city councillor Marge Lavallée who helped organize the event. According to Lavallée, radio station 94.7 FM Hits also attended for a few hours, playing music and announcing the tournament on air. Mayor Denis Martin was on hand to drop the first puck and to wish the participants and fundraisers success.

Big effort for autism

Lavallée explained the idea behind the day. “The reason for this tournament is my friend Kathy Normoyle has a son who attended Crestview, and she was so impressed by the aid her son Bradley Steben received she wanted to give back to Crestview,” Lavallée said. “It gave myself and the committee great pleasure to hold this event and to see the people and kids in the crowd.”

The committee who worked on the event were: Alfred Weippert, Douglas Parr, Margaret Lavallée, Kathy Normoyle, Diane Lavallée, Jessica Parr and Monica Horvath. Lavallée said that “great help” also came from Crestview Elementary principal Marie-Helene Goyetche, who is a Deux-Montagnes resident. Also helping, she added, were David Bourque and Melissa Lafrance. She said she also wanted to thank the City of Deux-Montagnes for its contribution, as well as Daniel Thompson. ■ for the week of May 1 to May 7, 2016

The luckiest signs this week: Cancer, Leo & Virgo

ARIES
You'll quickly recover all your energy and enthusiasm if you take the time to rest a little. You feel a kind of enlightenment that opens the way to a form of spirituality.

TAURUS
You show a lot of imagination. You might tackle a great masterpiece that will be very profitable for you. You will make a bit of an effort in gathering your friends together and organizing a small party.

GEMINI
You are responsible for an event that brings together several people. You discover a new side of yourself as you overcome your shyness.

CANCER
You are given some new responsibilities at work. They will enable you to develop new skills, which could lead to a raise.

LEO
You may have the opportunity to make a surprising journey, such as a pilgrimage. If you go, you will broaden your horizons, both personally and professionally.

VIRGO
There is a lot of emotion in the air, and this inspires you to make some big changes. You may even decide to go around the world on the spur of the moment.

LIBRA
You are faced with an important decision. Take some time to think before answering, or you will always be questioning the choice you made.

SCORPIO
There's a lot of work on the horizon. You may work on a file that is secretly entrusted to you. This could earn you a nice sum of money.

SAGITTARIUS
You may experience love at first sight with a person who turns out to be your soul mate. You both understand at first glance that you were made for each other.

CAPRICORN
If you're moving in the near future, do the rounds of home decorating stores in order to make your new surroundings more to your liking. Weigh your words before you express an opinion.

AQUARIUS
You undertake a major cleanup in your circle of friends, especially if you are owed money. You may feel puzzled in one way or another when someone confides in you.

PISCES
There is a good chance that you'll be offered a promotion at work; it will allow you to settle some of your financial worries. You finally see a bright future opening before you.

THE HUNTSMAN: WINTER'S WAR

G | 1 hr 54 mins | Action-Adventure |

Betrayed by her evil sister Ravenna (Charlize Theron), heartbroken Freya (Emily Blunt) retreats to a northern kingdom to raise an army of huntsmen as her protectors. Gifted with the ability to freeze her enemies in ice, Freya teaches her young soldiers to never fall in love. When Eric (Chris Hemsworth) and fellow warrior Sara defy this rule, the angry queen does whatever she can to stop them. As war between the siblings escalates, Eric and Sara unite with Freya to end Ravenna's wicked reign.

Ratchet and Clank tells the story of two unlikely heroes as they struggle to stop a vile alien named Chairman Drek from destroying every planet in the Solana Galaxy.

MOTHER'S DAY

G | 1 hr 58 mins | Comedy |

Intertwining stories revolve around a television host (Julia Roberts), a divorcee (Jennifer Aniston) looking for love and a woman (Kate Hudson) who wants to strengthen her relationship with her mother.

KEANU

13+ | 1 hr 40 mins | Comedy |

Clarence and Rell (Keegan-Michael Key, Jordan Peele) are two cousins who live in the city but are far from streetwise. When Rell's beloved kitten, Keanu, is cat-napped, the hopelessly straight-laced pair must impersonate ruthless killers in order to infiltrate a street gang and retrieve the purloined feline. But the incredibly adorable kitten becomes so coveted that the fight over his custody creates a gang war, forcing our two unwitting heroes to take the law into their own hands.

THE JUNGLE BOOK

G | 1 hr 46 mins | Action-Drama |

After a fearsome tiger threatens his life, Mowgli (Neel Sethi), a boy raised by wolves, leaves his jungle home and, guided by a stern panther (Ben Kingsley) and a free-spirited bear (Bill Murray), sets out on a journey of self-discovery.
